MIAMI, FL—Two cyclists were hospitalized with various injuries following a hit-and-run crash that occurred on Miami's Rickenbacker Causeway at approximately 5:15 a.m. on Feb. 15. CBS Miami reports suggested Miami Police have yet to identify or locate the motorist who fled the scene of the violent cyclist accident.

Miami crash survivor Enda Walsh, 48, told reporters, "We were cycling up the Key Biscayne bridge side by side, in the bike lane, having a conversation. We didn't even see anything. then there was a loud bang and the next thing you know I was on the ground and Aaron was 30 feet up the road lying on his back on the road not moving."

According to Miami Police Detective Lorraine Rubio, evidence at the scene suggested the hit-and-run car was a silver Honda Civic (2009 – 2011 model). That vehicle apparently slammed into Walsh and another cyclist, Aaron Cohen, 37, as they traveled in the eastbound bike lane of the Rickenbacker Causeway--which connects Miami to Key Biscayne and Virginia Key.

Responding paramedics rushed the injured bike riders to Miami's Jackson Memorial Hospital following the horrific cyclist accident. While Walsh was treated for a leg injury and then released from the hospital, Cohen's injuries were far more severe. Cohen underwent brain surgery upon arriving at the hospital. He was subsequently listed in extremely critical condition. It was not clear if Cohen sustained a traumatic brain injury (TBI) in the traffic crash.

The search for the hit-and-run driver involved in the injurious Miami crash continues.
